How to replace heat strip on foods	ave
------------------------------------	-----

The Weston Pro-2300 is considered the workhorse of the vacuum sealer world, it keeps going and going with little to no maintenance. However, much like any machine you will need to do some upkeep to ensure that the machine doesn't overheat. Removing the old strip The first step is to remove the worn out Teflon strip from the Weston Pro-2300. Slowly peel it off like an old piece of tape and place it off to the side in preparation for a new strip. Removed that needs to be taken off. To do this, it is recommended to use a small Popsicle stick sized spacer on each end. This will hold the spring from snapping back while you work on it. Place these on both ends of the vacuum sealer. Left side spacer Right side spacer on each end. There is one screw on either side holding it to the vacuum sealer. Once the screw is removed, set it aside somewhere safe where it won't get lost. Now you can gently lift the heating element off What is under the heating element? To ensure the machine doesn't short out, there is an additional strip under the heating element as shown in the photo below. Installing the new heating element Now that you have the old element removed, grab your new heating element and lay it into place, lining up with the screw holes. Using a magnetic screw driver is going to make this job a lot easier, so we recommend picking one up. Do not tighten one side all the way until the opposite side is loosely screwed in. Once they are both in place, you can tighten them tightly. Screwing down the new heating element Preparing for the new heating element because it will ensure the heating element doesn't stick to the bag as it seals the plastic. Before we lay the strip, we need to ensure the surface is clean. Grab some rubbing alcohol and a cloth and wipe the surface gently. Clean the heating element itself and the two white areas beside it. Once you have done that, use the other side of the cloth to dry it off. Cleaning with rubbing alcohol to ensure surface is clean for new Teflon strip Installing the new Teflon strip The Teflon tape will come with a yellow backing, peel it back approximately 2 inches. Peel the backing Place the Teflon strip flush with the edge of the machine, lining it up with the backing and pull tension as you lay it down. Continue to do this the whole way through (peel backing, apply tension, lay it down, repeat!) Laying down, inch by inch with tension Finished product installed correctly I have a small gap, is that normal? If done correctly, there will be a small gap as shown in the picture. This is completely normal and is used for cooling purposes. Ventilation gap being shown Thanks for checking out our tutorial on how to replace the heating element in a Weston Pro-2300.
